CCMS Drama Club plans Dec. 12-13 holiday comedy

The Crook County Middle School Drama Club presents “Who Will Be the Next North Pole Star?” by Alexi Alfieri Thursday, Dec. 12 and Friday, Dec. 13 on the CCMS stage, 100 NE Knowledge St. Doors open at 6 p.m., and the show begins at 6:30 p.m.

Mr. Jack Frost, the big shot TV producer of the North Pole Network, has shown up in the office of an old friend, Santa Claus. He’s looking for his next potential star and plans to give that lucky person their own television show on the NPN. Jack Frost is accompanied by his cameraman, Bud, and the two of them are ready to interview several possible candidates.

As expected, everyone wants to be a star. Mrs. Claus would like to have a holiday home decorating show. There are elves from the wardrobe department who would love their own “Project Runway” series. The kitchen elves want to show off their baking talents to a television audience, and elves from gift wrapping want to shoot some instructional videos. And not to be forgotten, Santa’s reindeer have their hearts set on dancing with a number of superstars on camera.

Only Jack Frost knows who will be the next North Pole Star, and his final choice turns out to surprise everyone.

Cally Modin advises Drama Club, and Katie Johnson assists. The play features 27 CCMS Drama Club students.

Admission is $5 for adults, $3 for students, and free for all CCSD students.
